In Vienna, still in ruins in the immediate postwar period, Elizabeth Montaigu, an actress and spy, is asked to act as tour guide to the British novelist Graham Greene, who is visiting Austria to gather information for the screenplay of his next film, "The Third Man." His stay, however, seems to have much darker and more complex objectives... Elizabeth will soon realize that Graham is actually at the center of a dark spy story that combines English, American, and Russian secret services, traffickers of all kinds, and illegal dancers. A fictional story, though rooted in reality, in which we discover that the Second World War could have ended a year earlier...
