Jeremy is a young man who lives in Paris, works at a video-game shop and leads a quiet and unambitious life. One day he runs into an acquaintance, Florence. Rather unsure of himself, Jeremy is troubled by this encounter... and, to tell the whole truth, by women in general!

Riad Sattouf turns a lucid, amused gaze on his generation, on the world of business and on male/female relations in general.

Friends, work, love: a sparkingly contemporary comic, crackling with truth, that yields up our world without complacency, and with plenty of irony and truthfulness.
