A few hundred years in the future, mankind lives in a space station far from Earth. The station is run not by a government, but by a multinational corporation worshiped by a veritable cult. At least on the surface, everyone appears to be satisfied by this "perfect society" until the day mankind decides to push its limits even further. They design a way to create life from nothing: in short, they plan to rewrite the Book of Genesis. The place they choose to carry out their project is Shangri-La, one of the more hospitable regions on Titan. As for the hero, he's charged with investigating a series of mysterious explosions in several laboratory stations dedicated to the grand plan...
