It is the second century B.C., Sparta, the famous city of warriors that cowed proud Persia and made the Peloponnese tremble, is a mere shadow of its former self. The unsettled King Nabis seems ready to do anything to restore Sparta's reputation, and doesn't hesitate to violate the ancient laws upon which the city was built. Under the command of the accomplished and respected Agesilaus, a band of men have withdrawn to Mount Penon, from where they wage a relentless war of resistance. One day, King Nabis summons the bounty hunter Diodorus and orders him to bring him the head of Agesilaus. The two men will embark on a private war worthy of their glorious ancestors...
