When a pair of thirtysomething, Parisian screenwriters tries to produce a bankable film after the COVID pandemic, they find themselves on an obstacle course through the amusing yet repugnant microcosm of the movies! Our two hip yuppies encounter an overly-tan, overly-smiley producer in a white shirt, a creepy director in his eighties, indifferent regional financing committee members, a young youtuber with 3 million followers-the frontrunner for the title role-and a legendary actress from the 60s as quirky as she is drunk! All that plus too many sidewalk cafés and too many train trips.

In the same vein as The Teckel, a satirical farce about cinema, largely inspired by Hervé Bourhis's attempts to get one of his books adapted for the screen!
