There's one character who's lost their innocence and has to get it back; there's another taking a priest for a picnic; another who's an illustrator in a fantasy New York; others who talk without communicating... In six stories, Roman Muradov shows, with much elegance and intelligence, that now more than ever we can fulfill literary ambitions by creating comic books. N.B. The rights for the story "Bladders" are available in all languages except English; the rights for the story "Lost and Found" are not available.
