Gilla, a young Italian woman, makes an overnight decision to leave her native country and her boyfriend to study photography in Paris. She's got the same things on her mind as any other student: love, friendship, her future. Except that she is also subject to strange visions of people who had supposedly died long ago... This is the first of a two-part series that whisks the reader through the romantic but sinister Parisian streets of today and yesterday. The illustration and nuances of the story are testimony to the author's remarkable sensitivity.
