Iran, 1953. France appoints the brilliant Jean D'Arvergnes as its ambassador. Despite his young age, Jean has a perfect grasp of the issues he's dealing with – and there are lots of them. Prime Minister Mossadegh is under attack from all sides, both by Islamists and the oil industry. The country could descend into chaos at any given moment. Caught between his principles and the cynical policies of Western states, Jean will have to make some risky decisions.
