June 13, 1944. One week after Allied forces land in Normandy, a V-1 flying bomb crashes into the northern suburb of London. It destroys some buildings in an industrial zone and claims several civilian lives.

Churchill doesn't want a second Blitz, so along with his American allies, he opts for a two-pronged approach: the defense of London and the destruction of the V-1 sites.

Louise Simon, a young chemical engineer specializing in nuclear research, and the unsung hero Doug Hunter, a talented fighter pilot with a touchy personality, will combine forces to accomplish a mission that risks upsetting the outcome of an undecided conflict in that summer of 1944.
