Cutie B is fourteen years old. Her mother still calls her by her nickname, which she hates. She spends a lot of time alone – her father is a high-powered, jet-setting businessman, and her mother, a supermodel, is rarely at home. So Cutie's well used to getting along by herself — her favorite pastimes being visiting museums or going for long walks. Having just moved to a new city, Cutie B wants to make friends. With her mother's glamorous job, Cutie quickly becomes popular in her new school. But only Sarah is really interested in Cutie for who she is. In Sarah, Cutie finally finds a friend who she can talk about everything : music, clothes, the mysterious man who follows her home from school, the boy she met online, and, of course, Sarah's brother, who Cutie immediately fell in love with, despite all her pretences not to like him...
