The small island of cape Tournebossole is rocked by the disappearance of one of its residents: the old pirate Auguste Shermann. Frequentio, a lawyer who only recently moved to Tournebossole, summons Shermann's four heirs: Cecil Shermann, aged 29, a broke coach driver and father living in England; Magdalena, aged 44, a fat detestable fallen noblewoman who's been living in Holland for years; and Carl Shermann, aged 53, a captain of industry and military man working in Africa. The fourth heir, Wilmina, lives on Tournebossole and was brought up by her hot-headed and often cruel father. The news of other heirs is disconcerting for Wilmina who thought she was the only family Shermann had! However, her father's will states that the four heirs must go looking for their inheritance as it's hidden somewhere on Tournebossole. Forced to work together, the four cousins go off in search of Shermann's treasure, but the more they discover about the pirate's past, the more treacherous their treasure hunt becomes...
