The good-looking and hotheaded Nadau, carpenter by trade, is also one of the finest blades of the country: it is said he is the son of the legendary d'Artagnan. With a bright mind and a lack of prejudices, he is not one to bother with morality: he is in love with two sisters and loved in return. And he marries both of them! Thrown on the road, then on the high seas in search of the haven where they might settle at last, Nadau, Angelina, and Leane face plenty of bias, threats, and danger on their way.
