Alix is a young woman who seems to have everything going for her. No sooner graduated in Art than she lands herself a job and signs a publishing contract for a graphic novel. In her personal life, too, she is having a smooth ride, living happily with her long-term boyfriend. Yet this happy public image contrasts sharply with a private anguish. Alix suffers terribly every time she makes love. At first, she blames herself, convinced that she must continue to have sex if their relationship is to survive. But before long, the pain becomes unbearable and she must tell Seb the truth.

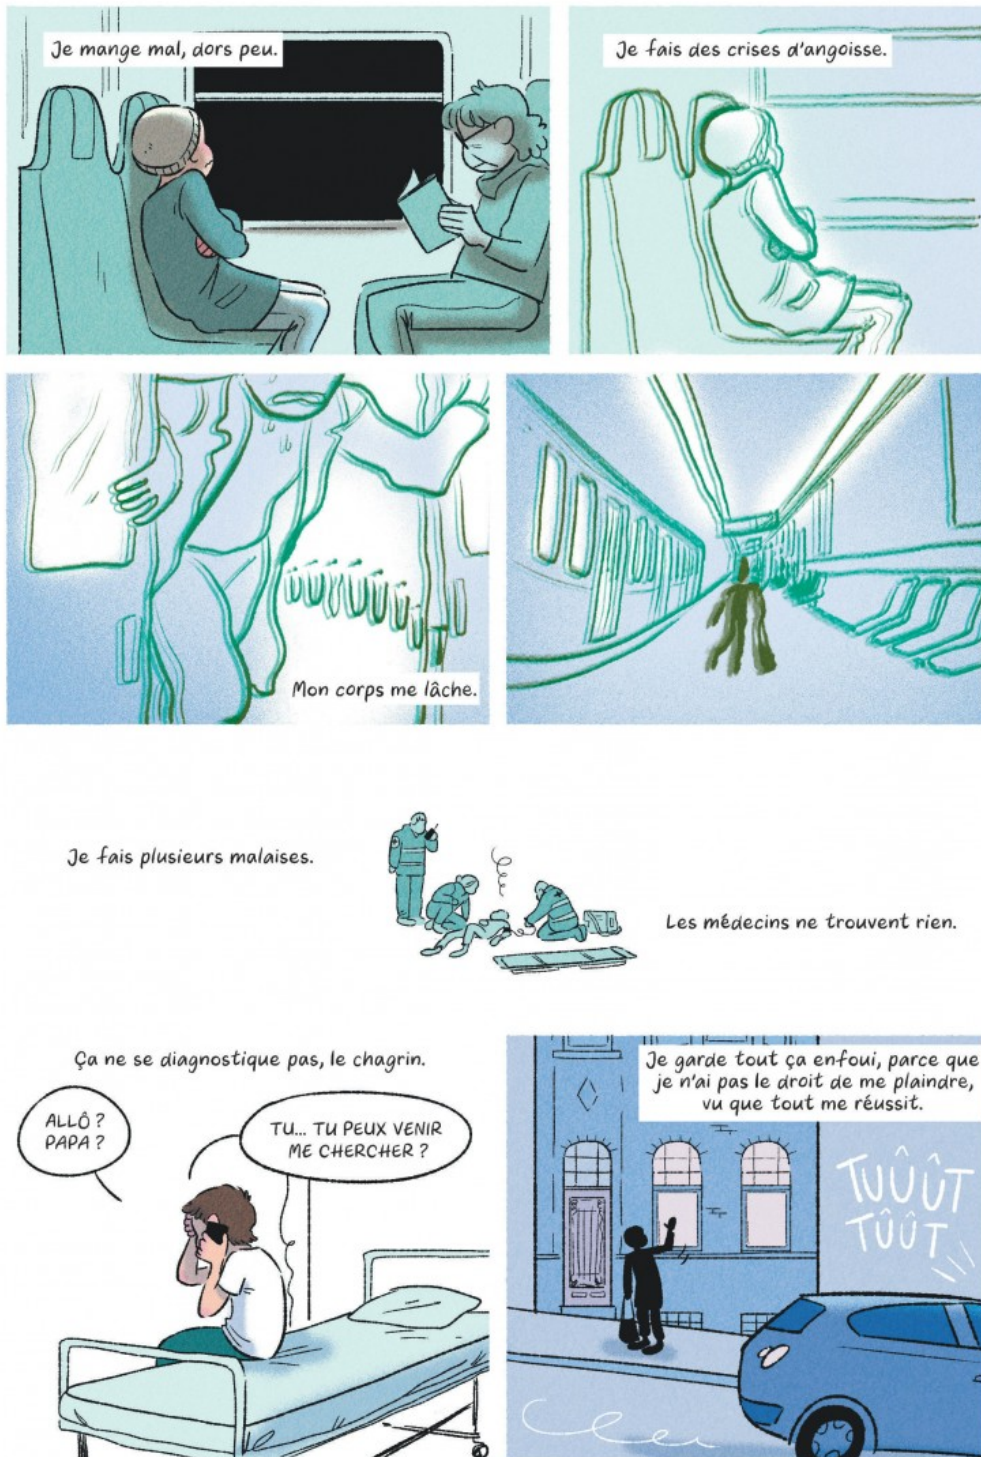

In this autobiographical story, Alix Garin speaks for thousands of women who suffer as she did but don't dare admit it—because female sexual desire is still a taboo subject in our society.

An abstract graphic of a human face in profile, facing right. The face is rendered with jagged, lightning-like edges, giving it a distressed or pained appearance. The color gradient transitions from a deep red at the top and bottom to a bright white in the center, set against a dark, textured background.
