The reverend Odilon Verjus has merit. This amiable missionary has his work cut out for him. The Vatican charges him with the most touchy and repellent tasks. If at least the ardour and the blunders of his young assistant, Father Laurent, do not get in the way. After the torrid jungle of the Papuans, after the easy virtues of Pigalle, after an ice floe of crazy Eskimos, after the fury of Adolph, our two warriors of the Faith travel to Brittany and come across the indomitable descendants of Getafix the druid.
