Isadora arrives in Paris at the same time as Picasso, but it's Rodin she discovers at the 1900 Universal World Exhibition. This discovery proves to be quite the revelation. Having previously believed only in simplistic Greek beauty, Isadora now wants to explore the passions that Rodin pounds into his marble. First and foremost, ecstasy. But it's easier said than done. Still, thanks to her various encounters, from the sculptor to Lo $\ddot{\text{e}}$  Fuller, Isadora enhances her art, dance, and never strays from her principles, no matter what continent she's on. She is continually tried and tested, like a magical flame that never goes out.

Je la vois, c'est elle, la plus célèbre danseuse au monde, de retour parmi nous pour une tournée mondiale!

Elle est superbe, sanglée dans son manteau ourlé de fourrure, rajeunie, embellie.

Ah, les vertus de l'amour ! En revanche, son époux semble avoir souffert du voyage. Il est bien pâle, verdâtre, oserions-nous vous confier.
