Thermonuclear tentacles or something resembling them – dangle from a space medusa floating in the infinite blue of the universe. Deadly things, to be sure – achievements of mankind's destructive genius. Up until that moment, nobody had ever seen the Taurans, knew what they looked like, or was aware of their true intentions. But the extraterrestrial enemies destroyed an earth-built rocket, or at least that is what was presented on television. Immediately both politicians and generals decree that it is high time that these bastards are finished off, once and for all. Thus begins the Big Conscription of 2009 and the formation of expeditionary elite corps. Marygay Potter was one of them. Now, after having turned her back on these murdering gobs, she remembers the prophesy of good old Einstein: 'I do not know what weapons will be used in the third world war, but the fourth will see the survivors fight with clubs.' Does she already know that war is eternal?
