A man walks alone. A port, a town. Further on, he follows a railway track as an escape route, the trees and the mountain, his ultimate destination, gets closer and closer. The man remembers. Snatches from the past, snatches from life. A woman, a soldier, an old couple, encounters. The man asks himself: how do you find your own tune among the world's cacophony?

In "Le Chant des Baleines", Edmond Baudoin tells an intimate story where text, lines and colours come together in subtle and violent harmony.
