Based on a true story. In 1945, the editor-in-chief Jean Doisy published a stunning text honoring two children killed in the Resistance movement during the Second World War. The children had become involved in the movement along with several of their friends and had followed the precepts of the Amis de Spirou (Friends of Spirou), an honor code shared by readers since the founding of the magazine in 1938. This three-volume work revisits the background and story of these kids from Marcinelle and traces the history of the magazine's creation, led by Jean Doisy and the Dupuis family.

In this series
