London in the early 20th century. Fascinated by history and the natural sciences, teenager Anna persuades her step-father, a famous archeologist, to take her with him on his latest mission—to Belize. As he looks for a lost Mayan temple, she discovers a country with an excitingly different culture; and, with the help of Tikal, a young Belizean, she tries to foil the plans of a group of antiquities traffickers.

In the first great adventure of her life, Anna must search within herself for reserves of courage, resourcefulness, and humility. Is the expedition in fact nothing other than a journey of self-discovery?
