This mix of fiction and real-life evidence tells the story of how the factory workers at LIP took over the building and continued production of the watches, with plans to make and sell them without the involvement of head office, in protest against the planned company downsizing. 329 days of struggle followed, which we will see through the eyes of Solange, a factory worker who was initially reluctant to join the protest, but who goes on to play a big role and eventually loses everything. A story which has a strong impact at the time, and which, unfortunately, is still relevant to the problems in our society today.
