Abel is an immigrant. Like so many others, he was forced to flee his homeland when war broke out. Now settled in France, he has built a new life for himself among his wife's family and is trying to forget his past. But one day he will have to go back, back to a country that he feels drove him away. After decades spent denying his roots, will he ever be able to return 'home'? Abel must try to rediscover his identity.
