In Gbado, Africa, the decaying capital of the T'Zee empire, rumors are spreading.

The old dictator has been assassinated. After a life of massacres and conquests, T'zee has not made only friends... even within his own family, there is dissension and disarray. What is to be done when faced with such chaos? His beautiful last wife, Bobbi, seems ready to do anything to maintain her lavish lifestyle; his son, Hippolyte, pushed into exile by his stepmother, and who sees this as a reason to take revenge, doesn't know how to deal with the disappearance of this extraordinary father.

But the old leopard has not had his last word. His claws are gone, but his mind is still cunning. And nothing is more fearsome than a wounded wild animal who smells blood...
