Come to the Valley of Wonders, where you will meet Honeypot, a prehistoric hunter who has the face of Joan Sfar, and his small family: Tender Night, his wife, and Spirit of the Elders and Tiger, his children.

Naturally, Honeypot also roams the world in search of food, lives a thousand adventures, and fights a thousand dangers alongside his friend Big Nose Of the Elders (an Indian who wears a loincloth). In the course of the story, we are reminded of Corto (the literary adventure with philosophical digressions), Astérix (for omnipresent humor and inevitable fistfights), and Thorgal (family life, and the touch of the fantastic). Above everything else, we find the warm, joyful and utterly inimitable style of Joan Sfar at the peak of his form, setting off a colorful new adventure that is suitable for almost all audiences.
